It is evident that the carbo-hydrates play great part in animal sustenance. It is clear that we lose by hard work. In fact, carbon is the motive force of animality—sun-force is the grandest manifestation—the adequate supply of which is indispensable at all times, and only question is—how much of it is actually required for vigorous existence and exertion? Whether in this, as in our oxygen supply there may be room for curement, is similarly to what has been afforded to the horse, namely, as Sir John Lubbock said last week at the meeting of the British Association, 6 lb. of coal was required to make a one-horse power, but now we can do it with 2½ lb. of coal. And what a temptation it is, that only 2½ lb. of coal represent the force of a horse in its utmost exertion!—National Food and Fuel Reformer.

east there. Then they return to her house and have another feast; and on the following afternoon she is taken to the bridegroom's house in a procession similar to that of the bride. She is conducted to the harem; her friends sup with her, and then depart.

The same evening the bridegroom submits himself to the incursions of his barber, and then goes to one of the mosques accompanied by musicians, torch-bearers, and friends. He says his prayers, goes to the mosque, sups with friends, and then returns to his house after a time; to the mosque and the friends, he provides the harem. There he takes the bride and her attendant. The bride retires; the bridegroom lifts the veil from the bride's head, and for the first time they face each other—from "Bashahel," by Colonel W. H. Knox.

He had been previously presented with the Freedom of the City of London, and his bust was placed in the Guildhall. Not long before his decease his portrait, painted by a sculptor, stood on foot at Wibsey, was placed in the Town-hall there. The present Aristocrat, however-Royal, too, and a few other private owners erected a granite obelisk to his memory over his remains, but it is remarkable that some more considerable memorial should never have been erected by the public authorities who were so anxious to honour him. The obelisk stands to the benefit of the human race. This deficiency, however, it is no longer proposed to supply. A committee, of which Wibseyites, supported by a distinguished number of patrons, are proposing to erect a monument to his memory, and to erect a statue to town a handsome monument and statue to him, to be designed by Sir Gilbert Scott, B.A.
